VACCINATION REQUIREMENTS

The United States immigration law requires immigrant visa applicants obtain certain immunizations prior to the issuance of their visa. The clinics authorized to perform medical examinations are responsible for verifying that all immigrant visa applicants meet the vaccination requirements.

All applicants must submit their available vaccination records during their medical examination. If you do not have the vaccination record, the panel physician will determine which vaccines are medically appropriate for you, according to age, medical history and current medical condition.

The cost of the vaccine(s) will depend on the type of vaccine(s) you need to meet the vaccination requirement. This charge is not included in the cost of your medical examination.

The information on the vaccines you will need to complete the vaccination requirement should be consulted directly with the clinics authorized to perform the medical examinations.
